

The graph I created is a 4 piece stacked area graph. It splits the data up by region to display the data in a more readable manner. The color scheme chosen was deliberate because it doesn't distract the user from the data. The splitting by region ensures that the data can actually be read instead of just appearing as a giant mess. Also, each section of the chart is evenly scaled, removing any false influence scale would have on the data.

